

Global trade

Choosing a range of products mark flows on the map showing which products make their way to the UK and from where. Use a large arrow to indicate when a high proportion of a given product is imported. You might use the trade section of your atlas to provide this information. Try to find a recent source of information. Write on the map anything that you find which is of interest to the way that the companies are doing business. If you have access to the internet try to find examples of products that are sourced from locations you might not expect. For example many fruit juices contain concentrates that come from China.
